The Confidence to Climb Down

I remember climbing up the tree with its perfectly placed branches. Left hand, right foot, right hand, left foot: one followed the other with ease, as if I were part squirrel. I had my sights set high on the perfect perch that would essentially earn me the title of King of the Castle or Princess of the Playground when, suddenly, my focus was interrupted with a familiar shout, "That's high enough!" Had I not lost this argument at least a dozen times before, I would have considered expressing my sincere desire to reach my perfect perch. Instead, however, I conceded and decided to turn back. Turning back, hmmm: sounds simple enough, but somehow turning wasn't happening, and finding the footholds going down and backward was much more difficult.

A CLOSER LOOK AT THE CLINICAL ADMINISTRATION PRN

The Clinical Administration PRN (CADM) was started in 2001 to provide programming for pharmacists involved in leadership roles, directors, clinical managers, operations managers, and those in academia. Members practice in both inpatient and outpatient settings. Members have been involved in a variety of ACCP committees, task forces, and other leadership roles. Several members have participated in the Leadership and Management Academy Certificate Program.

Q & A

How do I approach someone at a meeting that I don't know but would really like to meet or include in my professional network?

Clara Ting, Pharm.D.
PGY1 at Brigham & Women's Hospital
Boston, MA

View the response from Dr. James Tisdale.
